Ford Foundation Grant for $100,000 for each of three years (1994-96) with the Cuban American National Council (CNC) to fund the Cuban American Policy Center -- this grant could only be funded through CNC and not the University of Miami because it is part of a program to fund non-profit, Hispanic-run, serviceproviding agencies. However, this grant provided benefits for UM because of an internship program we are developing and the research I have generated through it.

Latino Institute-Carnegie Corporation Grant for $127,000 (for 1994-1996) with the Cuban American National Council (CNC) to fund the Latino Urban Policy Agenda (LUPA) project. This project involved study of five cities in a joint effort with 4 Latino policy centers (the Cuban American National Council, the Tomás Rivera Center, the Institute for Puerto Rican Policy, and the Latino Institute). The goal was to determine key problems facing Hispanics living in Miami, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Houston. This grant could only be funded through CNC and not the University of Miami because it is part of a program to fund non-profit Hispanic-run service-providing agencies. This project has supported one Ph.D. candidate and one M.A. candidate from the University of Miami's Graduate School for International Studies.

Research Council Grant, University of Miami, $3,245, Atlas of Puerto Rico Project, 1992-93.

University of Miami, University Research Council, James W. McLamore Summer Awards in Business and the Social Sciences, for summer of 1993. (approximately $9,200)

31. Latino Institute-Carnegie Corporation Grant for $22,000 with the Cuban American National Council (CNC) to fund the Latino Urban Policy Agenda (LUPA) project. This project involves study of five cities in a joint effort with 4 Latino policy centers (the Cuban American National Council, the Tomás Rivera Center, the Institute for Puerto Rican Policy, and the Latino Institute). The goal is to determine key problems facing Hispanics living in Miami, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Houston. This grant could only be funded through CNC and not the University of Miami because it is part of a program to fund nonprofit Hispanic-run service-providing agencies. The research of this team effort will be presented by four of the project's directors during a special session I have organized for the Association of American Geographers meeting in Chicago this coming March. This project has supported for 1994 one Ph.D. candidate from the University of Miami's Graduate School for International Studies. It will also support him for next year (1995).
